

RESTORING THE ANCESTRY OF WALTER<sup>1</sup> ASTON OF CHARLES CITY COUNTY, VIRGINIA

By Paul C. Reed, FASG, and Nathan W. Murphy, FASG

The goal of scholarly pursuit in almost any discipline is to marshal the best available evidence and draw the soundest conclusions that can be formed from that evidence. In genealogy, each conclusion is subject to the possibility that new evidence may surface that would necessitate a reassessment. The best approach is to make a reasonably exhaustive search for available and relevant evidence, then to formulate and weigh all possible explanatory hypotheses, drawing conclusions based on the best fit of evidence, with the understanding that the process may need to be repeated.

A circumstantial origin of the Virginia immigrant Walter<sup>1</sup> Aston was widely circulated by the mid-twentieth century. He was plausibly presumed to be the youngest son of Walter Aston, gent., of Longdon, Staffordshire, found in a pedigree in the 1633-35 Visitation of London, where his youngest son, Walter, was stated to be then in the "West Indies"—a term which could encompass Virginia in the early days of the colonies. The same visitation pedigree shows this family as derived from a gentry family of Tixall, Staffordshire, which has been further traced to include royal descents.<sup>1</sup>

So things stood, when an estate record was discovered which, when carefully considered, brought this presumed identity into doubt.<sup>2</sup> The proceeding concerned the estate of Walter Aston of Longdon, Staffordshire, on which administration was granted on 25 January 1646/7 to his son and namesake, Walter. The estate file includes notice that the son Walter died before he could take administration of the estate, which was instead assumed by a son-in-law of the elder Walter.

<sup>1</sup> The visitation pedigree is in Joseph Jackson Howard and Joseph Lemuel Chester, eds., The Visitation of London . . . 1633, 1634, and 1635, 2 vols. Harleian Soc. Pubs., 15, 17 (London, 1880-83), 1:29. The Virginian is connected to it in John Bennett Boddie, Virginia Historical Genealogies (Redwood City, Calif., 1954), 272-78, who also traces royal descents, which were reprinted in Frederick L. Weis, Magna Charta Sureties, 1215, 1st ed. (Boston, 1955), line 101, and various subsequent compilations.

The dissonance presented by this estate record was that the Virginian died in 1656, a decade after the date on which the younger Walter Aston in the estate record was said to have died. This appeared to show that these two Walters of the estate record and the London visitation were not the Virginian and his father. Could one consider that an honest mistake may have been made by his sister and brother-in-law, presuming the younger Walter dead while in fact he was still alive in Virginia? Or did they perpetrate a fraud on the probate court by declaring him to be dead and assuming administration? Such a fraud might be plausible in a large court where the family was not well known—a court which covered a whole diocese or much of the country—but this estate record was in a “peculiar,” a special ecclesiastical court which, in this case, served a solitary parish. It seemed highly improbable that in a single-parish peculiar a fraud concerning one of the gentry families of that parish could have stood for a decade. Walter Aston of Virginia was a reasonably prominent planter and burgess, who almost certainly had mercantile interests that would keep him in regular communication with England over that decade.

To challenge this implication of the estate record and retain the presumption that Walter Aston in the “West Indies” in the 1633–35 visitation was the Virginia immigrant, one would have to postulate two pairs of fathers and sons named Walter Aston in the rural parish of Longdon, Staffordshire, both gentlemen, but not distinguished from each other in known records—two pairs of Walters who belonged to the small elite residing in the same parish over the same period of time. No parish registers survive for Longdon for this period, but a search of lay subsidies revealed no residents with the surname Aston at Longdon whose personal wealth reached the threshold of taxation (as would normally be expected of a gentleman).<sup>3</sup> The 1641 Protestation Return, which lists all adult male inhabitants in any parish for which it survives, records only one set of men named Walter Aston, older and younger, at Longdon.<sup>4</sup> The simplest conclusion from the estate record and due diligence in available Longdon records was that there was only one contemporary pair of Walter Astons; that the young man in the “West Indies” in 1633–35 was dead by 1646; and that any claim of parentage for Walter Aston of Virginia would require a concrete explanation of the facts on hand before it could be allowed to stand.

Recently, however, a court proceeding surfaced, which reopened the case. It concerned a son-in-law of Walter Aston, gent., of Longdon, the father in the Longdon estate proceeding. Zacharie Kirke, son-in-law of Walter Aston, gent., having successfully obtained administration of Walter Aston’s estate, sued the husband of Aston’s other daughter.<sup>5</sup> Discovery of this lawsuit led to a new examination of the known evidence, which in turn led to a string of new clues and additional discoveries both within and outside Longdon. With more documentation in hand, we have been able to reconstruct a much more complete picture of the Astons involved.

As previously presumed, there were not two father-son pairs of gentlemen named Walter Aston living contemporaneously in the parish of Longdon. But there were two contemporary father-son pairs named Walter Aston who lived at Longdon at different times. One pair—the pair named in the London visitation including, we may now again presume, the Virginia settler—left Longdon some years before the other father-son pair—those involved in the estate proceedings of 1646—arrived.

The Walter Aston whose estate was administered in Longdon in 1646/7, and whose son Walter did not long survive him, was originally from the parish of Standon, Staffordshire, some twenty-five miles to the northwest; he appears to have settled in Longdon only by about 1630 at the earliest—at least fifteen years after his namesake had left that parish.

Of the other father-son pair, the father, Walter Aston, appears originally to have been of Longdon. He apparently left Longdon in the 1610s, many years before his son and namesake, Walter, would venture to the “West Indies” (i.e., Virginia) in 1628. From 1610 to 1616, Walter Aston and his wife, Joyce, entered into a number of transactions by which they divested themselves of his hereditary estate in the parish of Longdon. Joyce was of a lesser social status: the daughter of a yeoman who had married a young widow with many children. Joyce’s inheritance could not be disposed of as it had not yet come into their hands. Walter and Joyce Aston lived beyond their means and were supported financially by two of their sons who had established themselves in London.

<sup>5</sup> Zachary Kirke v. Robert Saunders and Alice, his wife. Bill (complaint) dated 21 May 1651; answer dated 19 June 1652 (TNA C 6/11/187: Court of Chancery: Six Clerks Office: Pleadings before 1714, Collins).

Walter and Joyce Aston ended their days in the borough of Leicester, where he died on 30 March 1638 and was buried in the church of Leicester St. Martin.<sup>6</sup> His widow, Joyce, survived a little under two years and was buried there on 18 February 1639/40. Their faithful and loving sons Simon and Robert, both grocers of London, had by then supported their parents to the tune of "at the least" £500 over fourteen years. The eldest son, Thomas, had established himself in Ireland, where he would die in the Irish rebellion of 1641-42. The youngest son, Walter, was apparently already in Virginia.

In 1795, John Nichols, the Leicestershire historian, noted that a brass plate commemorating Walter Aston on the north wall of the Church of Leicester St. Martin "was copied at the Heralds' Visitation [of Leicestershire] in 1683; but is not now remaining." He described it thus:

Arms . . . a fess; in chief three lozenges. Crest, a bull's head couped. "Here under lieth interred the body of Walter Aston, esq. born at Longdon in Staffordshire, who had to wife Joyce, the daughter of — Nason, gent. of Rowingstone in Warwickshire, by whom he had issue five [sic] sons, viz. Edward, Thomas, Simon, and Walter; and three daughters, Joyce, Anne, and Katherine; who departed this life the 30th day of March, anno Domini 1638, and being aged . . . years."<sup>7</sup>

The monumental inscription explicitly names a son Walter, even though the last was not mentioned in his father's will. Walter Aston, of the parish of St. Martin, Leicester, made his will on 23 November 1637:

The name of god Amen I Walter Aston of the Burrough of Leicest[e]r in the County of Leicest[e]r gent., beeing (prayed bee god) in good and p[er]fect health yet considering the frayletie of mankinde with the certaintie of death and uncertaintie of the tyme thereof, and being willing to expresse my desire of makeing some requitall to my two most loving and kinde sonnes Simon Aston and Robert Aston for their greate love, care and chardge which they have beene at in keepeing and maintaineing mee and my wife (theire mother) with all things convenient for us at all tymes as our necessities required for these fowertenne yeares last past to their chardges (at the least) of five hundred pounds, doe make this my last will and testament in manner and forme following First I freelye yeelde my soule into the hands of my most mercifull god hoping by the alone merritts of my lord and Saviour Jesus Christ to have the free remission of all my sinnes and life everlasting, And my bodye I com[m]it to the earth from whence it was taken to be buried at the discretion of my executors hereafter named, It[e]m I give unto my loving wife (in case shee shall survive mee) All my goods Cattle and Chattle whatsoever, but if I fortune to survive and overlive her then I give and bequeath all my goods Cattle & Chattle that I shall have at the tyme of my death unto my aforesaid loving sonnes Simon and Robert and I doe make them the executors of this my last will and testament, And I doe heartily de-

John Angell Ri: Martins Samuel Wanley<sup>8</sup>

The will does not name a son Walter, but the other family members mentioned here obviously match the Aston family of the 1633–35 Visitation of London. This testator, Walter Aston, had no money to distribute and had been financially supported by two other sons for years. It is therefore entirely consistent that another younger son—long since departed across the ocean—would not need to be named and would receive no legacy.

This new information, properly considered, not only resolves the problem of the Longdon estate record, which had cast the Virginian's presumed identity into doubt, it offers further details that are consistent with the Virginian as son of the Leicester testator and descendant of the Tixall family, as asserted in the 1633–35 Visitation of London pedigree.

<sup>8</sup> Leicestershire Record Office, PR/1/249 (images, findmypast.com; inventory, PR/1/40). This will had long been sought without success. Because Walter Aston was presumed to have owned land in multiple jurisdictions, his will was expected to have been proved in the Pre-rogative Court of Canterbury [PCC] or at least in Lincoln rather than in a lower diocesan or diaconal court. At this time, the Archdeacon of Leicester reported to the Bishop of Lincoln. The Bishop of Lincoln, John Williams, had been suspended from July 1637 to August 1638, during which time Archbishop William Laud (of Canterbury) administered Lincoln's affairs. Yet it appears that while Williams was suspended, the Archdeacon of Leicester did not remand Aston's will to the PCC, but simply proved it at Leicester (see David M. Smith, Guide to Bishop's Registers of England and Wales [London, 1981], 24, 130, 132). Additional notations relating to the probate of this will might be found in the Bishop of Lincoln's Register (Lincolnshire Archives Office, Add. Reg. 3, "the Red Book," ff. 198–222 [May 1635 to Aug. 1641, including "much probate material"]) or in Archbishop Laud's register at Lambeth Palace, but these were not examined.

The summaries that follow here include detailed genealogies of the two Walter Aston families: First, the immediate Longdon and Leicester family of the immigrant's apparent father, followed by the family of the other Walter Aston of Longdon, who died intestate in 1646/7.

SUMMARY: WALTER<sup>A</sup> ASTON OF LONGDON AND LEICESTER

WALTER<sup>A</sup> ASTON, said in his monumental inscription to be born in Longdon, Staffordshire, was identified in the 1633-34 Visitation of London as the son of Leonard Aston of Tixall, Staffordshire.<sup>9</sup> He died as a resident of the borough of Leicester, co. Leicester, 30 March 1638,<sup>10</sup> and was buried in church of Leicester St. Martin (now Leicester cathedral) on 1 or 9 April 1638.<sup>11</sup> His wife, whom he married by say 1590, was JOYCE NASON, daughter of Thomas Nason of Kingswood in Rowington, Warwickshire, and his wife Isabel Baker (married say 1571-73), daughter of Richard Baker of Rowington.<sup>12</sup> Isabel (Baker) (Eaton) Nason was previously married to Thomas <sup>9</sup> Howard and Chester, Visitation of London [note 1], 1:29; Boddie, Virginia Historical Genealogies [note 1], 273-74. Leonard Aston, b. by 1542, has not been researched for this article; further research on him and the Tixall line would be welcome.

Received for the Bells for mr Walter Ashton vs. iij*d*."

<sup>12</sup> The manor house and farmhouse of Kingswood lie in the northwest corner of Rowington, but the bulk of the manor was in the adjacent parish of Lapworth, absorbed into the Fellers estate by that time. It was attached to the more distant manor of Wellesbourne, where the Nason family was earlier established as tenants ([Victoria] History of the County of Warwick, 8 vols. [London, 1904-69], 5:112). Thomas Nason, yeoman of Kingswood, Rowington, Warwickshire, made a will 17 Jan. 1620/1, proved 10 May 1626, by which he left his daughter Joyce Aston 10*s*., his daughter Elizabeth Eborall 10*s*., his grandchild Rebecca Eborall 5*s*., the like to his grandchild Katherine Eborall. He mentioned John Eaton's children, Thomas Eaton's children, Jane William's children, Elizabeth Eaton (relationship unspecified), kinsman Rowland Eaton, Anne Howman, grandchild Elizabeth Warner, and servants. He gave the residue to his daughter-in-law Alice Nason [the widow of a deceased son and heir], whom he made executrix, with Robert Warner and Henrie Ebberhall of Shrewlie overseers, both of whom signed as witnesses (Consistory Court of Worcester, original wills, 1626, no. 139 [FHL film #98029]). The will is also briefly abstracted by John Brooks Threlfall, Twenty-Six Great Migration Colonists to New England and Their Origins (Madison, Wisc., 1993), 76a (insert between pp. 76-77). "Mrs. Nason widow [i.e. Alice] was Buried August 3" 1639 in Rowington (John W. Ryland, Registers of Rowington, co. Warwick, Parish Register Society, 21 [London, 1899], 16). The Rowington parish registers only exist from 1638; some earlier years, 1616, 1619-24, 1628-31, 1633-37 being transcribed from the bishops' transcripts. Thomas Nason had three children, according to his will: (1) a son who predeceased him, leaving a widow, Alice, and a daughter, Elizabeth Warner, (2) a daughter Joyce Aston, and (3) a daugh-

1634/5 (Warner does not appear to have been a resident of the parish). Alice Nason of Kings-wood, widow, made a nuncupative will dated 8 Oct. 1638, proved 3 Oct. 1639, inventory £21
03. 11/2. [FHL film #98058]. By this will she gave 20s. each to John, Thomas, Job, Nathaniel, Sarah, and Alice Eaton; 10s. to Anne Collett, widow; clothing to Marie Higgins; 20s. each to Thomas Smith, Alice Greene, Constance Eborall, Edward Collett, William Haines, and executor; witnesses were Samuel Warner, Robert Warner, William Hains, and Anne Collett.

Henry Eberhall, husbandman of Shrewley in the parish of Hatton, Warwickshire, made a will 15 March 1629/30; inventory dated 9 April 1630, appraised by John Eaton of Rowington (a later emigrant to New England—see note 12) and others. By this will, he gave his youngest daughter, Katherine Eberhall, £40, made it clear that his elder daughter, Rebecca, wife of Peerson Waite, had no children, and mentioned his brother John Eberhall and his children.
John Eaton was among the witnesses (Consistory Court of Worcester, original wills 1630, no.
54 [FHL film #98037]).

Salisbury and Haverhill, Massachusetts," TAG 68(1993):48-54. There is an account of Richard Baker in Threlfall, Twenty-Six Great Migration Colonists [note 11], 82a, abstracting his will and inventory. Richard Baker's original will is found at the Consistory Court of Worcester, 1588, #829, with bond, #854k [FHL film #97895]. The will of Thomas Atwood, Isabel's brother-in-law, made 26 Oct. 1584, proved 8 Sept. 1585, shows that Isabel m. (2)
Thomas Nason (Consistory Court of Worcester, wills, 1585, no. 63 [FHL film #97931]). The will is also transcribed in full in John William Ryland, Records of Rowington. . . , 2 vols. (Birmingham, 1896-1922), 1:211. There was no Nason or Eaton family at Rowington in the 1524 or 1525 subsidies, which should have recorded anyone of their status (Ryland, Records of Rowing-ton, 1:138-40, gives 39 names in each year, including Richard Baker, the only Baker in those subsidies). A Richard Baker appeared in records of Rowington in 1486 (with wife "Kat[her]jina"), 1492, and 1509 (Ryland, 1:19-20, 23, 213). There were earlier Bakers at Row-ington recorded in the Guild of Knowle back to John Baker and his wife Emmota in 1460 (Ryland, 1:212-15). Tenements that Thomas Atwood held of the manor of Rowington were detailed in a rental dated 1561, including "in right of his wife one parcel of meadow late of William Shakyspere, called 'the Forthinge'" (Ryland, 1:154). Other relevant tenements were held by "Richard Baker's daughter . . . lately of Thomas Bucke," and by "Thomas Yeton" (Ryland, 1:156).

Walter Aston appears to have been a trustee with Humphrey Beardmore for Ralph Mynors of Hollinbury Hall in 1600.<sup>15</sup>

From 1610 to 1616, Walter Aston and his wife, Joyce, created a series of final concords for the most part disposing of his inherited lands in Longdon and nearby parishes. These transactions help explain why the Astons would uproot themselves and relocate to the city of Leicester.

Boddie, in Virginia Historical Genealogies [note 1], 274, makes this erroneous statement: "In 9 James I. [1612] Walter Aston, gentleman, and Joyce, his wife, sold 54 acres of land to Edward Hill. Shortly after that Walter Aston, Knight, sold land to Walter Aston, gentleman, and Joyce his wife, 434 acres in Longdon (Salt Vol. III, N. S. p. 41)." The land conveyance noted on p. 41 was actually for 436 acres. The 54 acres would be the separate fine published on page 63 of the same volume. Boddie missed the other relevant fines published in this series; the stated year of the fine he mentions was also incorrect.

Walter and Joice remitted all right to William and his heirs, for which William gave them £100.<sup>21</sup>

[7] Octave of St. Michael, 12 Jac. I [ca. 6 Oct. 1614], between John Kinge, gentleman, complainant, and Walter Aston, gentleman, and Joyce, his wife, deforciants of a messuage, a barn, a dovecote, a garden, and an orchard in Longdon, and of a moiety of the free chapel of Longdon. Walter and Joyce remitted all right to John and his heirs, and covenanted that they would warrant the said tenements against Walter Aston, knight, and his heirs, for which John gave them £41.<sup>22</sup>

[8] Octave of St. Michael, 14 Jac. I [ca. 6 Oct. 1616], between Walter Adye, complainant, and Walter Aston, gentleman, and Joyce, his wife, deforciants of 2 messuages, 2 barns, a garden, an orchard, 7 acres of land, 6 acres of meadow, 8 acres of pasture, 4 acres of wood in Longdon [total, 25 acres]. Walter Aston and Joyce remitted all right to Walter Adye and his heirs, for which Walter Adye gave them £41.<sup>23</sup>

Walter Aston appears to have relocated to Leicestershire about the same time as this multi-phase alienation of Longdon lands. A Walter Aston, gent., of Sheepy Magna, Leicestershire, was plaintiff in two Star Chamber lawsuits in July and October 1616,<sup>24</sup> at about the same time the Sheepy Magna parish registers record the burial of Leonard Aston, gent., on 15 May 1616, who Although their domicile is not known from the 1610s to the 1630s, Walter and Joyce had likely been living in the borough Leicester for some time when he died in 1638.

Thomas, an army officer in the English Civil War, engaged in the Irish rebellion around Waterford and Wexford and kept a diary of those events.<sup>36</sup> Embarking from Bristol on 20 Feb. 1641/2 and landing near Wexford with 200 troops, Capt. Aston engaged in sorties and skirmishes for the next several months, making his base at Fort Duncannon, but eventually he was caught off guard when engulfed in a foggy mist and was killed at Hook Head. The Irish commander Thomas Roche took Aston's head to Wexford for display as a trophy, according to the testimony of Thomas's eldest son and heir, Edward Aston.<sup>37</sup> The name of Thomas's wife is not known. <sup>37</sup> Depositions by Edward Aston from the Irish Rebellion of 1641 are both online and in print. His deposition on 15 Dec. 1642 describes him as "Edward Aston of Kilbarrie in the county of Waterford, esquire," and states that since the death of his father, Capt. Thomas Aston, Esq., he had been deprived of rents and profits at Killbarry, Allenkaine, the Crook and Collin in the county of Waterford, and Polmontan in the county of Catherlaghe worth £3,076, "[a]nd that he this deponent being his eldest sonn" is likely to be deprived of the farm of Kilbarry, 32 years remaining on the lease, worth £178 per annum; the Crook, worth £268, a lease of 17 years remaining worth £60 per annum; and a farm called the Collin worth £30 per annum; so his losses total about £268 per annum (Trinity College Library, Dublin, "1641 Depositions," MS 820, f. 009r). Later depositions date from 3 Feb. 1653/4 (when Edward had attained the rank of major), and other dates (MS 818, f. 221r ["aged about thirty four yeares"], f. 245r ["thirty foure yeares"], and f. 274r; MS 819, ff. 039r, 042r, 043r, 044r, 209r, 269r, and 280r). Aston's diary was published in Philip Herbert Hore, History of the Town and County of Wexford . . . (London, 1904), along with other pertinent documents and accounts of the rebellion. A letter from Maj. Edward Aston to Capt. Clarke of the Jacqueline dated at Dublin, 9 Feb. 164[5/6], about Irish affairs concerning the Admiralty, is preserved in the State Papers. The Protestant government was planning on "transporting" 3,000 Irish from Wexford (where Aston had interests). Of Aston, Capt. Robert Clarke wrote, "He is said to be honest." Aston had no love for the non-Protestant Irish, calling them "the bloodthirsty miscreants, the Irish." He believed that many of the local Protestants would quickly join forces when they heard he was "on board," and that provisions should be made in advance for them, and for Edward to command a company of 100 himself, or to command a regiment if enough men could be raised (Calendar of the State Papers Relating to Ireland of the Reign of Charles I, 4 vols. [London, 1900-3], 2:437-38).

APPENDIX: WALTER ASTON OF STANDON AND LONGDON

1 ROBERT ASTON, of unknown origin, was instituted as rector of Standon, Staffordshire, in December 1570.<sup>53</sup> He was buried at Standon on 2 August 1604 as "Robert Aston late p[ar]son of Standon." Robert married at Standon, 13 February 157[3]/4, MARY BROUGHTON, "daught[er] of Mary Broughton widdow." The bride's mother, Mary Broughton, widow, was buried at Standon, 2 February 158[2]/3.<sup>54</sup> The bride's parents were apparently Roger and Mary (Halcot/Holcott) Broughton; a brother of Roger Broughton, Richard Broughton, had married Katherine Aston, a member of the family of Aston of Aston, Cheshire.<sup>55</sup>

Robert Aston was both rector of Standon and vicar of Alstonfield. One Elizabethan clergy list describes him as having no degree and no license to preach.<sup>56</sup> A more personal account of "The Lamentable Estate of the Ministry in Staffordshire" in 1604 describes the vicar of Alstonfield, Mr. Robert Aston, as a non-resident, "pluralitant, a grievous swearer, whoremaster, and drunkard, and very unlearned," and not a preacher. The same description is given of Robert in the account for Standon.<sup>57</sup> Robert Aston was vicar of Alstonfield from 1564 until his death in 1604, but Robert had curates serve at Alstonfield in that period.<sup>58</sup>

"Roger Broughton of Charleton within the Dioces of Coventre and Lichefeld" made a will 24 January 1573[/4], proved 7 October 1574. By it he requested burial "in the church of Stanndon," and left to "everie one of my daughters" £6 13s. 4d., without naming them.<sup>59</sup> "Mary Broughton of Walford in the p[ar]ishe of Standon w[i]thin the Dioces of Coventry and Lichfeild late wife of Roger Broughton deceased" made her will 20 April 1584, which was proved 5 May 1585. By it she gave to "my daughter Mary Aston nowe the wief of Robert Aston" ten marks, provided that all expenses could be covered by the testatrix's estate. She named "Robert Aston clerk p[ar]son of Standon my sonne in lawe" as an overseer.<sup>60</sup>

Robert Aston died intestate in 1604. His goods were appraised by George Broughton, gent., William Short, and Henry Cawdwell at the modest sum of £61 17s. 8d., with possessions more typical of a modest farmer than of a clergyman. On 17 August 1604, Mary Aston, relict of the deceased, renounced administration in favor of their son Walter Aston of Elford,<sup>61</sup> Staffordshire, yeoman, who posted bond for tuition of Robert's minor children, Katherine, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Dorothy Aston.<sup>62</sup>

2. WALTER ASTON was born on the manor of Standon, Staffordshire, and baptized at Standon on 25 January 157[6]/7. Walter Aston was described as age 56 in 1635, age 55 in 1635, and age 63 in 1641.<sup>66</sup> He died at Longdon, Staffordshire, before 25 January 1646/7 (possibly as early as 1643 or 1644—"about 8 yeares since" in the lawsuit of 1651-52).<sup>67</sup> He married ALICE —, who was his wife in February 1609/10. He was styled "gentleman" in 1635, 1641, and 1651 (after his death).<sup>68</sup> His widow, Alice, married, second, —

<sup>64</sup> Entries in the Standon register prior to 1601 are grouped in years beginning in Advent [16 Nov.]. Richard's burial is entered under 1582; the baptism of his sister Margaret is under 1586.

<sup>65</sup> H. Sydney Grazebrook, Heraldic Visitations of Staffordshire . . . 1614, and . . . 1663-64 (London, 1885), 295, states that Humphrey Vise of Staundon, age 67, m. (1) Elizabeth Aston, daughter of Edward Aston of Charleton, Staffordshire. Humphrey Vise, son of William, was bp. Standon, 25 Aug. 1585. Elizabeth Aston, "daughter of Edward gent & Margaret," was bur. Standon, 1 June 1596. Elizabeth Aston, "daughter of Edward Aston gent & serv[an]t to the Right Honble. Earl of Essex" was bp. there, 23 Dec. 159[7]. Edward Aston, gent., and servant to "the Earle of Essex, at Dublinge [Dublin]," was bur. 8 Sept. 1598. Margaret Aston, widow, was bur. 21 Aug. 1634. This was the only other Aston family recorded in Standon in that period.

Proctor; she married, third, Richard Greatrix, with whom she was subpoenaed in the 1651 lawsuit brought by her son-in-law Zachary Kirke.<sup>69</sup>

In the court baron of Andrew Vise, Esq., held at Staundon (alias Stawne), in 17 James [1619 or 1620], the jury presented and fined Humfrey Vyse (gent.), 2*d.*, John Greenwood of Staundon, 2*d.*, Walter Aston clericus, 2*d.*, and others, for digging "on the waste of the land of the lord for a foundation for a mill, and have carried away the same land at their own will without licence of the lord."<sup>70</sup>

Three wills of Walter's mother's Broughton kin substantiate life events and relationships in this Aston family. By his will dated 2 April 1622, proved 24 January 1622/3, "Thomas Broughton of Bowers in the p[ar]lishe of Stanndon in the Countie of Stafforde gent" gave "unto my Cosen Walter Aston my short sword."<sup>71</sup> By his will dated 10 May, 20 James I [1622], proved 7 October 1622, "Edward Broughton of Stanndon in the Countie of Staff gent" left "unto my Cosens Walter Aston, Robert Aston, Elizabeth Aston & Margaret Aston Eight poundes to be equally devided by forty shillinges a peece."<sup>72</sup> By her will dated 25 February, 12 Charles I [1636/7], proved 13 June 1637, "Anne Broughton of the Hall of Standon in the Countie of Stafford Spinster" left "to my Cosin Walter Aston . . . Fortie shillinges whereof there is twentie shillinges in his hand alreadie."<sup>73</sup>

Walter Aston provided depositions in a number of disputes between the Bowes and Brooks families concerning inheritance of the manors or lordships of Elford and Okeley and other events.<sup>74</sup>

In 1641, "Walter Aston of Longdon in the countie of Staff gent aged threescore and three yeares or thereabouts" recited his lifetime migrations as testimony in a chancery deposition:

[1577/8] b. at the Manor of Standon

[1598] age ca. 20, moved to live with Sir John Bowes [of Elford]<sup>75</sup>

<sup>70</sup> Salt, History of Standon [note 51], 110. It is unclear why Walter is referred to as clericus (though as already noted, his father, Robert Aston, had served as a cleric without university degree or license to preach). Salt wondered if the father, Robert Aston, was meant, but Robert had been dead fifteen years.

The Bowes family of Elford is recorded in the visitations of Staffordshire, as is the Brooke family of Haseler (buried at Elford with monumental inscriptions).
